In every man there has been implanted a need of (desire for) knowledge, differing only in its intensity. But the passive human mind, while utilizing every means possible to it of taking in (and working over) impressions, often gets into an impasse in trying to find an answer to the question "Why". Gurdjieff on the Enneagram (Fourth Way & Sufism) Gurdjieff never explicitly divulged the sources of his teachings and the origin of the enneagram has been a source of speculation. The most prominent theory regarding the source of the enneagram is probably J.G. Bennett's who believed that Gurdjieff learned the enneagram from Sufis in Central Asia (Gurdjieff: Making a New World, 1973).
