earlier is of little value in terms of long-term outcome. However, it does turn you into a patient, subjects you to medications and procedures of little value. Overdiagnosed: Making People Sick in the Pursuit of Health ... According to the good doctor, overdiagnosis is a long recognized problem in the medical field and it can lead to over-treatment of conditions that might never cause symptoms or harm the patient. But the treatment can, and often does, have side effects, some of which can have lifelong negative impact on the patient's health. Amazon.com: Overdiagnosed: Making People Sick in Pursuit ... The authors- Welch, H. Gilbert; Lisa Schwartzl; Steve Woloshin, meticulously present their point of view on how modern medicine has led us into overdiagnosis-making more people sick in the name of early detection as preventive medicine, using lot of data, their own thinking and experience as medical doctors. Amazon.com: Customer reviews: Overdiagnosed: Making People ... Overdiagnosis occurs when people without symptoms, either by falling on the wrong side of a test threshold (e.g. blood sugar, cholesterol, bone density score) or undergoing screening, are diagnosed with a condition that either would not have caused a problem, would have caused a problem later but did not benefit from early diagnosis, or receive a 'false-positive' diagnosis (leading to anxiety, further tests and treatment with no potential benefit but with potential harm). Doctor Skeptic: Book review: Overdiagnosed In other words, excessive diagnosis can literally make you feel sick. And more diagnosis leads to excessive treatment—treatment for problems that either aren't that bothersome or aren't bothersome... 'Overdiagnosed' - The Gilbert Welch, Lisa Schwartz, Steve ... A complex web of factors has created the phenomenon of overdiagnosis: the popular media promotes fear of disease and perpetuates the myth that early, aggressive treatment is always best; in an attempt to avoid lawsuits, doctors have begun to leave no test undone, no abnormality overlooked; and profits are being made from screenings, medical procedures, and pharmaceuticals. Beacon Press: Overdiagnosed Screening for selected diseases has its place, of course, but overenthusiastic and uninformed screening in the pursuit of health is more likely to do harm than good, by making people sick for no reason. And stripping away a person's sense of wellness is no small thing, as Dr. Clifton Meador wrote in his 1994 essay "The Last Well Person":
