In this book, Neil Postman argues that (a) childhood is a social construct, not a biological fact and (b) childhood is disappearing because of television and modernity in general. The former is debatable but defensible (his exclusive focus on Europe/America leaves significant holes in his argument), but the latter is just ridiculous. The Disappearance of Childhood by Neil Postman Verified Purchase. Childhood disappeared because people statistically defined childhood in the late 19th and early 20th century. This arbitrary and artificial category did not exist for most of history and the promotion of this artificial category has only promoted generational disunity.
