Probability of the option expiring below the upper slider bar. If you set the upper slider bar to 145, it would equal one minus the probability of the option expiring above the upper slider bar (or $1 - .3762 = .6238$ or 62.38%). This is the same as the probability of the option expiring worthless. Calculating Potential Profit and Loss on Options | Charles ... XYZ is trading at $100 and you decide to buy the 110 call option that has a 30% probability of ITM. The probability of touch for this option will be around 60%. This means that the theoretical probability that XYZ's price will rise to $110 sometime before expiration is around 60%. Options Trading Probabilities Explained - POP vs ITM vs ... The Trade and Probability Calculator provides calculations that are hypothetical in nature and do not reflect the actual investment results or guarantee future results. The calculations do not consider commissions or other costs, and do not consider other positions in your account(s) for which a specific trading scenario is being examined. Trade & Probability Calculator Edge is the probability of a win. We can see that the mechanics of the formula are such that the larger the value of Edge the lower will be the risk of ruin. This is also intuitively logical because the greater your edge in any strategy the more likely you will have more winning trades.
